What you get

TPM has the potential to completely transform lives and generations. It is a complex skill to learn. Becoming a proficient TPM facilitator takes time—often two years or more. Everybody learns at a different pace. Your skill as a TPM facilitator is contingent on (1) your gifting and calling, (2) the quality of the training you receive, (3) the time and energy you are able to put into your training, (4) the length and type of your experience.

Our aim during this course is to train you to facilitate TPM sessions at a basic level, that is, to provide meaningful ministry to some people, but not to others. (If you have had previous training, then you will be trained at a more advanced level.) You will be trained to recognize when you're "out of your league," when you need help, how to get help.

Completion of training does NOT automatically qualify you for any type of staff or volunteer position at CrossCounsel. Completion of training does NOT automatically mean that CrossCounsel will endorse your ministry or refer ministry recipients to you.

Dwight & Kim Clough

Instructors • Kim Clough’s vision is multiplication. She’s committed to empowering you to reach the next level because she wants to mentor TPM ministers who can train other ministers. Kim has thousands of hours of experience facilitating TPM sessions and training people to facilitate the TPM process. Kim will be the primary instructor for the hands on training. Dwight’s vision is helping people understand the paradigm shifts that come with a true understanding of TPM. Dwight is the author of Spiritual Self Defense, a book that explains the process of transformational prayer and the framework behind it. He also has hundreds of hours of experience facilitating and training people in TPM. Dwight will plan and help teach the survey of the TPM process.

Requirements/prerequisites
